

Come to the Writing Center

By Alex Taft

Have you ever felt lost while writing for a school project? Like you know that your writing could be improved in some way, maybe you even know exactly what you want to improve, but you just don't know how to improve your writing? Well luckily for you, the new Oak Hills High School Writing Center will be opening on November 16th to help you with all of your writing needs. The mission of the Writing Center is to make sure that the students of Oak Hills have a helping hand in writing projects for classes and have a means to improve their own writing abilities. Students will be able to "flex out" during X-bell to head to the Writing Center at room 518, where they will then be assigned one or two writing consultants, Juniors and Seniors who are gifted in writing ability, to help them with their specific writing needs. For example, let's say that you're writing a practice IWA for AP Seminar, and while you're wanting the paper as a whole improved, you're more specifically really struggling with providing good commentary over your evidence, so you come to the Writing Center during X-bell for help with improving your commentary. You'll be assigned a writing consultant who is especially good at writing commentary, have a session with them, and may come out with not only a better paper, but also a better understanding of how to write good commentary in the future. That is once again the Writing Center's ultimate mission: not just to help with one paper, but to teach students how to write better essays and papers for the future. You can get writing help with more than just English classes too. The Writing Center is more than happy to assist you with history essays, scientific writing, and more. If you can write it, the Writing Center can help! So, if you ever run into a roadblock in your writing, come to the Writing Center in room 518!
