

Why You Should Study Abroad

By: Jessica Niehoff

Are you looking for an incredible educational opportunity with exciting adventures and priceless memories, consider studying abroad. Studying abroad is an incredible opportunity and should be taken advantage of. Many colleges and universities allow for students to study abroad, and for a pretty good price as well. Studying abroad has many benefits that will help advance your knowledge about what you study and can overall educate you about many world cultures other than your own.

Studying abroad lets you see the world outside of your own community. Seeing the world amongst your own allows you to understand other cultures and what other people value.

Understanding other cultures is something that you will never regret, it can open your mind and change your perspective on many things, such as the value of life itself, religions, and the viewpoint and value of nature. By studying abroad it brightens your horizons on just how diverse the world we live in is.

Studying abroad gives you access to many different career opportunities all over the world. Not to mention taking educational opportunities overseas to expand your knowledge looks great on a job resume. You can make connections all over the world and almost guarantee you will have a job straight out of college.

Studying abroad for a semester costs $18,000. However, colleges like University of Cincinnati, help students study abroad as low as $4,828. Federal student aid is also given to students who choose to study abroad. However high the cost though, the experience of studying abroad and the memories you will make are priceless.

Studying abroad can also help you advance your knowledge in another language. When studying abroad in a country that does not speak your native language you learn to quickly pick up on their language. Learning another language also gives you more appreciation for different cultures. Putting that you are bilingual on a job resume will also allow you to get a job over someone who is not. That is just one of the many reasons why you should study abroad.

Overall spending a semester or more in another country allows you to advance your knowledge not just about the topic you are studying, but also more knowledge about the world around you and shows you other perspectives and values different cultures hold. Studying abroad will also advance you in the career field as well. If you get the chance to study overseas, do not think twice about doing it! It will be an experience you will never regret and will end up paying you for the rest of your life! Take that opportunity and enhance your knowledge and make studying abroad the highlight of your educational career!